Kariz

Kriz or Kahriz is a Persian word meaning “aqueduct”. Aqueduct or Kariz was invented by Iranians and has a historical background equal to the civilization of the Ancient Iran. Despite its long history and development of modern technologies, it is still vital for people living in many hot and dry areas. Aqueducts usually start from the heights or the mother well and finally end in Kariz embody where water comes out of ground. Kariz Underground City includes three aqueducts and 274 wells which are an amusement place and allows people to visit the ancient aqueducts in the beautiful island of Kish. Some of these wells are totally intact and some others have been turned into a conoid form for better ventilation of light and air. Kish Aqueduct dates back to more than 2500 years ago and it used to supply the fresh and drinking water of island habitats. Kish Aqueduct is not comparable to other aqueducts in Iran in terms of length and depth. However, considering the very low slope of the island, underground water leading to the surface in Kish is highly important and shows that the most advanced methods were used at that time for digging the aqueducts. Some of its exquisite features are its eight meters roof that is mostly filled with fossils, shells and corals that date back to 270-570 million years ago in experts' idea and each and every one of them has been identified and has a formal identity.

Glass Bottom Boats of Kish

One of the unique and different experiences in the beautiful Island of Kish is sailing on glass-bottom boats. As the name suggests, the bottom of these boats are made of glass and the sea can be easily seen. That is, when you are in these boats, you can see the bottom of the sea, its depth and the creatures in it. Watching the clear water of the Persian Gulf and its unique sea creatures will be memorable.
